As a grante Gloss.

THE facond of March, being the day appointed for the seaperiment of M. Blanchard, every thing was prepared for it in the middle of Ganip de Mari. He had issued an immeose number of tickers, and the place was crowded with all ranks of people. His snachine was ingeniously contrived. The balloon was condituated on the principle of Mass. Charles and Roberts, and had wings and a helm, the mechanism of which was curious and philosophic. By applying the principles of mechanics to the discovery of the air balloon it was his project to shew that it was practicable for man to navigate the upper regions of the air. The adventures had prevailed on a young physician, Dour Pech, a Benedictine of Se Marrin des Champs, to go with him as his campagnon de supage, for the purpose of making experiments on the atmosphere. When every thing was ready for their attempt, about a quarter after eleven o clock, the young gentleman foated himself is the car, with a drawn swar for their attempt, about a quarter after eleven o clock, the young gentleman foated himself is the car, with a drawn swar for their effect of the purpose of making experiments on the atmosphere. When every thing was ready for their attempt, about a quarter after eleven o clock, the young gentleman foated himself is the car, with a drawn swar ready for their attempt, about a quarter after eleven o clock, the young gentleman foated himself is the car, with a drawn swar ready for their entempt, and they endeavoured by every means, but in vain, to prevent his going up. The tumult was excessive and outrageous; and in pressing on the machine, the globe inself of the machine, but a deal of the gar in the globe being disspaced by the damages it had reconved from the machine mounted into the air; but a deal of the gar in the globe being disspaced by the damages it had reconved from the machine, would have postponed his experiment; but, in his account, he sa a fudden calm, and he remained stationary for fourteen minutel. He then repassed the rivers during all which time the clouds were under him, and he experienced another calm which last ed about suscensives, and during which the fan was very warm. A contrary gale then spring up, and he was carried with extreme velocity towards Moutrouge; in this direction, he cacked four times by means of his helm. Perceiving that his globe was diminishing by the loss of air which it had fustament, and that he was descending, he threw out four powed weight of his ballast, and he remounted. To prevent his coming down in the river, he threw out the reft of his ballast, and as length descended in the plain of Bullancourt, after having been in the mr an hour and a quarter; in the course of his sisters excursion, he experienced, he says extreme heat, and afterwards extreme cold, a very sharp appetite, and strong disposition to extreme cold, a very that appetite, and flrong disposition to fleep. His arrival was witnessed by a groud of spectators, and he drew up the account of his journey in the presence of the Duc de Fronsac, and the Marquis de Laigle, de Morraigous. Die de Froniac, and the Marquis de Largle, de Montalgene, de Montalquieu, and de Reaulx. In regard to the question, whether it is impossible to direct the acrostante mach rese in the air, M. Blanchard fays, that though deprived of the principal part of his machinery, his wings, yet by means of his helm and toll, he was able, not only to withstand the rapidity of the gale, but also to accomplish what none of his predecessors have effected, the failing, in reality, against the wind.

Mr Jervoise made a report from the Committee on the victualling enquiry, which was read, and ordered to lie on the General Smith observed, that as he then faw the Chancellor of the Exchequer in his place, and probably should not see him there again in the present Parliament, he would take that opportunity to remind him, that there was now on the table a pecition from the creditors of the Nabab of Arcot, praying relief. The fum doe to them was nearly equal to the capital flock of the East India Company, being no less than 3,000,000. Sterling. Probably his Majefly's Mini ters would adopt fome declive measures relative to India, before the next sellion; he begged the Chancellor of the Exchequer, therefore, would not forget the petition of the Nabob's creditors, but take some effeetual step to procure them rehef.

The Chancellor made no reply.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

WEDNESDAY, March 24.
THIS day his Majetty came to the House, and being feat ed on the Throne, the Commons were fent for, who come, the King then gave the Royal affent to seventeen pu-blic and fix private bills; after which his Majesty made the following most gracious Speech from the Throne's

" My Lords and Gentlemen,

" ON a full consideration of the present figuation of affairs, and of the extraordinary circumstances which have produced it, I am induced to put an end to this fellion of Parliament. I feel it a duty, which I owe to the constitution and to the country in fuch a fituation, to recur as speedily as possible to the fense of my people, by calling a new Parliament.

" I truff that this measure will tend to obviate the mischiefs arifing from the unhappy divisions and distractions which have lately fabfilted; and that the various important objects which will require confideration, may be afterwards proceeded upon with less interruption, and with happier effect.

" I can have no other object, but to preferve the true principles of our free and happy constitution, and to employ the powers entrufted to me by law for the only end for which they were given, the good of my people."

The Earl of Mansfield, as Speaker of the House of Lords, by his Majeffy's command, then faid,

in My Lords and Gentlemen,

" It is his Majesty's Royal will and pleasure, that this Parliament be prorogued to Tuefday the fixth day of April next, to be then here holden, and this Parliament is accordingly prorogued to Tuesday the fixth day of April next."

The Prince of Wales came in there to the House, and attended there in his place.

From the London Papers, March 25.

This day a Proclamation was iffeed out by order of his Ma Jefty for diffolving the prefent Pair ment, and for appointing a time for a new Parliament to meet for the dispatch of divers weighty and important affairs.

A lift was yesterday handed about, by which it appeared that po less than one hundred and fifty members of the last.

ment would not fit in the next.

It is expected, that the first point of contention between the opponent parties in the enfuing Parliament will be the choice of a Speaker, the Minister not Laving the strongest attachment to

No less than eleven candidates are talked of for the city of London, and it is believed that nine of them will stand a poll, which, we hear, is fixed to begin next Monday.

The Inhabitants of Wellminder are in high forits on Lord Hood offering himfelf a candidate for that place, it being an object they much wifted for, and his joining with Sir Ceeil Wray is supposed to have given the death-wound to Mr Fox's interest there

The town was yellerday thrown into a very great ferment, by one of the most extraordinary incidents that ever happened in the annals of hillory—Some robbers having got out of the fields, over the garden-wall of the Lord Chancellor's House, in Great Ormand Street, from thence found means to get into the area, where they forced two bars of the kitchen window, and proceeding through it up flairs, made their way into a room adjoining to his Lordship's study. Here they broke open feveral drawers, and at left coming to that in which the Seal of England is deposited, they took it out of the bag in which it was kept, and carried it off, together with two filverhilted fwords, and about 100 guineas in money.

The two fwords appeared to have been drawn, on their getting possession of them, probably in order to secure their retreat, and the scabbards left behind. The instrument also, by, which thefe daring robbers forced their entrance, was left belvind, which is faid to be a plain, but extremely well-tempered tool, at once calculated for defence, or breaking open locks. It is remarkable, that the robbery was effected with to little noife, that not one of his Lordinip's fervants heard them, either during their flay, or in wrenching off the bars.

The Great Seal confids of two parts, about the fize of a fmall plate, one folding over the other, and the impression made by it is on both sides of the wax. The matter of which the Seal is composed, is chiefly filver, in value about 30L but the workmanship amounts to a vast deal more:

No finall confusion enfeed yesterday in the Cabinet, on the discovery of this very mal a propos robbergy which was the more unlucky, on account of the very pressing demand for new writs, consequent to the expected dissolution.

As foon as the Chancellor was apprifed of the robbery, information was instantly fent to Bow-steer; from whence, as well as from every justice shop to other parts of the towa, the runners were dispatched on all sides, but hitherto, without efwo watchmen, however, who had flands near, were taken into custody.

The public reman full of expectation on the fubied; and both yesterday and this day, the conversation of the town is more engrossed about the above robbery, than disher about the prorogation of diffoution of Parliament.

proposition of defloation of Parlament.

No small confusion trote yetlerday in the Cabinet, in confequence of a robbert to make propos, confidering the prelling demand of the Seal to the new warm, in confequence of a preliment is however, it being recollected that a nother feal was departed in the Lower, that was procured from thence lateralytes by the Signet-Royal; and the prefent urgent business of Government will therefore have suffered little or no impediment from the very fingular robbery.
The Great Seal being really staten, it is a doubt with many, whether there is not a cirtual end, for a time, to the office of Chancellor - The following paffage from Blackstone will not be wholly unapplicable to the question - "The office of Chancellor or Lord Keeper is with us, at this day, created by the mere delivery of the King's Great Seal into his cuffody; whereby he becomes, quithout writ or patent, an officer of the greatest weight and power of any now subfilling in the kingdom, and superior in point of precedency to every temporal Lord."

Several curious questions arife on this extraordinary circum stance. Can a proclamation be iffued without the Great Seal Certainly not; but cannot the King in his Council constitute any feal for the time being the Great Seal of England? - Several lawyers yetterday delivered it as their opinion that he could; while others faid, that this could only be done by the power of an Act of Parliament. When James II, threw the Great Seal into the Thames, expedition was used in having another made. Another question arises. Have we at this instant any Lord Chancellor at all? The Act says, that "taking a-" way the seals determines the office"—Will the robbery be, in the legal conflruction, taking away the Seals? Must be not be again fworn into the office, and the ceremonies be repeated on delivering to him his new Scal? The ceremony that contitutes any feal the Great Seal of Englandin, that the King delivers the feal into his hand before certain Officers, and he is required to use it as the instrument of the King's pleasure. The mere impression cannot make it so; for that is in the engraver's power. The ceremony originally used in making any other seal the Great Seal may now be used without requiring the particular figure of that which is lost; but perhaps the Chancellor must again be sworn.

The last attempt of this nature was made by the famous Co-lone! Blood, whom in the year 1671, formed the daring plan of carrying off the Crown from the Tower. Blood went with a woman, whom he called his wife, to fee the regala; he was habited like a clergyman, and having by various are infimiated himself into the good grices of Mr Edwards, the keeper, he made propolals of marrying his nephew to the old man's daughter, and the other of March was fixed for an interview. At that time he went with three companions all armed with rapier-blades in their canes, and each with a dagger and a pair of pitols. The old man was sendy to receive his quelts, and the daughter her gallant Two of his companions went with him, and the third Rayed at the door to watch. As foon as they bad entered the room where the Grown is kept, and the door, as much, that behind them, they threw a cloak over the old man's head, and gaged his mouth. Having fecured him from crying out, they plainly told him they were determined to have the Crown, Globe, and Sceptre; and if he would fulmat to it; they would pare his life, otherways he might expect no mer-cy. The old man making what notice he could, they knocked him down will a maller, and thabed him in the belly. Concluding him lead, they omitted to the his hands behind him, but they proceeded immediately to the objects of their robbery. one of the companions, put the Globe into his pocker; Blood was taking the Crown under his cloak, and the third beginning to the the Sceptre in two, when the fon of Mr Edwhich, that instant on his return from Planders, came to the door. Being thos disturbed, they went off without the Sceptre; and the Md man recovering his senses, though dreadfully wounded, get up and called out, " Treaton! murder!" The daughter feeting him, rushed out after the plunderers, and cal-led our, at Trador, stop thief—the Crown is stolen." On led our, "Treaton, flop thief—the Crown, is stolen!" On came to the drawbridge, discharged a pittol at the head of one of the Warders! and you over: they then got through the outward gase upon the warf, and were making fiaste to their horfes, calling out themselves." Stop the rogues." But a Captain Buckman coming to with them, Blood discharged his second pittol at the Captain's head, but missed him. He was then leized, and he had even the audacity to struggle for the the Crown. When it was wrested from him, he said, " It was a gallant attempt, though unfaccefsful -it was for a Crown. The subsequent circumstances were no less curious than the oregoing. He was examined by the King, and instead of be foregoing fle was examined by the King, and initial to ing condemned to die, a pention of 500 to year was fertled on
